ABOUT US

History of Marble and Humanity

Marble has been one of the most ancient and valuable building materials in human history since ancient times. Iconic structures such as temples and statues in ancient Greece and Rome were built with marble. This strong and aesthetic material also plays an important role in luxury interior design and home decoration in modern times.

Marble has also held an important place in Turkish history, especially in the Seljuk and Ottoman periods. Magnificent structures such as the Sultanahmet Mosque and Topkapı Palace are the main examples reflecting the elegance and durability of marble. Marble stands out as an element that shapes the delicate details and rich cultural heritage of Turkish architecture.
